INT. COFFEE SHOP - DAY 3

Start → Mike is lingering by the condiment station, stirring his coffee, as a young woman, ALYSSA LANG, sidles up next to him and takes the lid off her steaming cup...

MIKE
Careful, that's really hot. A woman once sued McDonald's for getting burned.

Alyssa nods, fakes a slight smile, tries not to act rude.

MIKE (CONT'D)
Then again, you could just say you got burned and sue them anyway.

Now she looks directly at Mike with suspicion.

ALYSSA
Who are you?

MIKE
It's not who I am, it's who I work for: Tim Petroff.

ALYSSA
You mean you're the asshole who locked me out of my office.

MIKE

No, I'm the person who's here to stop you from making a huge mistake.

ALYSSA

You can't talk to me.

MIKE

Hey, I'm just fixing my coffee. You want to walk away, walk away. But before you do, I'm going to say to nobody in particular, you need to fire your lawyer.

ALYSSA

I'm not firing anybody.

MIKE

Then you should know falsely accusing a man of sexual harassment is a criminal offense. And no matter what Travis Tanner said to convince you you'll get away with this, you won't.

ALYSSA

I'm not falsely accusing anyone, there's nothing in that complaint that isn't factually correct.

MIKE

You're twisting those facts and it could ruin a man's life and you know it.

ALYSSA

And how is that different from him ruining mine?

MIKE

It's completely different.

ALYSSA

Is it? I worked for that man 60 hours a week for ten years. And now that I want to start my own company, he not only wants to crush me, he told people I stole the idea. If that's not "ruining a person's life," I don't know what is.

ALYSSA (CONT'D)

And as far as Travis Tanner goes,
sexual harassment wasn't his idea,
it was mine. And when he tried to talk me out of it, I told him he can either get on board or watch me get another lawyer, because I'm fighting this thing to the end of the earth.

She exits...
