

CARMELLE

You should come to the game Dad.
You haven't been out in a month.

JOSEPH

I'm too old for that.

CARMELLE

You know, he really looks up to you.

JOSEPH

Maybe if you were around more, he wouldn't have to.

CARMELLE

Dad. That's not fair.

JOSEPH

Life's not fair.

CARMELLE

He just wants to be a part of your life.

JOSEPH

I didn't ask you to move me here.

CARMELLE

Dad, we've had this discussion.

JOSEPH

I was doing fine.

CARMELLE

You were lying on your back in a diabetic coma, for God's sake.

JOSEPH

Should have left me there.

Carmelle throws down a drying cloth.

CARMELLE

I can't believe you! I break my back to look after you every minute that I am not at the hospital, and you haven't said one nice thing to me or Evan since you've been here.
I know Bruce is dead. I know mom is gone. And it's awful, but you have to get on with your life!

JOSEPH
I don't have to listen to this.
