As they approach the entrance we see through the glass as owner CHEN removes the mask and momentarily joins them outside.

CHEN

Two-hundred dollar.

GRAHAM

For what? You had it on consignment.

CHEN

Take up window space. Two hundred for what would sell, it not there.

Graham takes an inch-thick stack of cash from his inside breast pocket, peels off two hundreds, gives them to Chen, and gives the rest to Miguel.

GRAHAM

"Window space" fee's on you.

Under which Chen retrieves the mask from the window, starts to hand it to Miguel.

GRAHAM (CONT'D)

That's mine.

OFF Graham, taking the mask.

EXT. RUSTIC ARTIST'S STUDIO COURTYARD - DAY (D16)

An anxious ROXANNA waits. HEINRICH STRAUSS, 50, shoulder-length white hair, placid demeanor, the world's most accomplished (and modest) art forger, joins her.

ROXANNA

I appreciate you meeting with me on such short notice, Heinrich. My trip to Germany was sort of spur of the moment.

STRAUSS

I am glad you enjoy my work. I have several new pieces I would be happy to show you.

ROXANNA

Actually, I'm interested in your ability to... mimic other artists.

STRAUSS

I don't understand this.

You said Pina here wanted to be sure whoever she sold it to was a big time fan, so -- picture's worth a thousand words, right?

INT. ROXANNA'S CONDO - NIGHT (N18)
A $2 million Tribeca 1 bedroom. Roxanna enters from the hallway to find her sister CLARISSA HEWITT, 38, casually reading a magazine on the sofa.

CLARISSA
Hey. I let myself in. Dad still acting like he could run a marathon tomorrow?

ROXANNA
(nods; uneasy tone)
Yeah, he's in complete denial; like the heart attack never happened.

CLARISSA
Our reservation's at eight so we should probably leave.
(re: magazine)
I need this dress.

ROXANNA
I got a sort of troubling call today.

From who? CLARISSA

Alex White. ROXANNA

CLARISSA
East Hampton Alex White?

ROXANNA
Yes. Apparently her nanny is friends with your nanny.

CLARISSA
Monica?
