BRYAN

Okay, what did I do now?

NOELLE

Nothing.

BRYAN

Clearly I did something. You've haven't spoken to me since we got out here.

(beat)

If you're going to act like this, I wish you'd have just stayed back at the hotel.

NOELLE

I bet you would have loved that.

(beat)

If I wasn't here, maybe Hector'd let you be Atheria's wardrobe boy.

BRYAN

Is that what this is about? Are you jealous of Atheria?

NOELLE

No, this isn't about Atheria. It's about us.

BRYAN

Us? What us? There hasn't been an us since you went back to school.

NOELLE

What? So I'm not supposed to have a career now?

BRYAN

If you'd just gone to nursing school, you'd already be done -- and your work hours would be far more regular.

NOELLE

That's not get into that again. Besides, you know what I think it is? I think you're just threatened.

BRYAN

Threatened?! What a joke...

(beat)

Maybe this weekend was a mistake.

CONT - 7

NOELLE

Maybe it was.

(beat)

I need water.

She points to his water.

NOELLE

Can you give me some of that?

Bryan polishes off the rest of the bottle.

NOELLE

Great. See? See what I mean? Most husbands would kill for their wives.

*
*

BRYAN

What wife? I'd love to meet her.

*

NOELLE

God forbid some wild animal were to attack us out here. You'd save yourself and leave me to be mauled.

BRYAN

Let's stop being so dramatic. There's plenty more water in the car.

EXT. AT THE SUV - DAY

Bryan goes for the door -- sets off a blaring alarm.

BRYAN

What the...?

NOELLE

I can't believe it. He locked the door.

(beat)

I'm so fucking thirsty. I blame you.

BRYAN

Why, because I drank the last of the backwash? There's plenty more water in the car.

31 EXT. DEVIL'S ROCK - LATER

31

The alarm continues to blare as Bryan and Noelle sit apart from one another, not speaking. Hector clicks off the alarm with his key chain.

BRYAN

Afraid of thieves out here, Hector?
