

Who is it? SHE

It's the dentist HE

Good. You finally made it SHE

What happened to your nose? HE

I bumped into the door. Close it would you. SHE

Look, I want you to give back what you took from me. HE

Sorry? SHE

You know what I'm talking about. HE

No, I really don't. Did you lose something? SHE

I tell you what. You give me back what you took and I won't say a word to anybody HE

But I didn't take anything SHE

Bullshit HE

Look, I thought you came down here for something else. You'd better leave. SHE

Alright enough. You're a drug addict. You know it, I know it. Last night I had a fridge full of narcotics, this morning they were gone. HE

So? SHE

Don't make me call the police.

HE

So go ahead and call

SHE

(into phone) Yes this is Dr. Sangstrom...

HE

Okay, you win

SHE

Susan look, I don't want to threaten you. I just need the drugs back.

HE

My brother took them

SHE

Where is he?

HE

Who knows. Selling it somewhere

SHE

So what's the drill. You roll into town and you line up a few dentists or do you hit doctors too?

HE

Dentists are easier. They're dumber. No offense.

SHE

Gee thanks

HE

Look, its nothing personal. It's what I do. Its not that I like it

SHE

So why do you do it?

HE

It's like I said. I have a brother.

SHE

Leave him

HE

SHE

He finds me.

HE

Is that what happened to you nose?

SHE

Don't rub salt into my problems. I can do that myself.

HE

Yeah, I can tell. When is he coming back?

SHE

Who knows. Maybe a day or two

HE

Well listen to me. You tell him he has two days. If I don't get the stuff back by then, I'm sorry, but I will have to call the police

SHE

Are you going?

HE

I have to

SHE

Could you just stay a little longer. Please. (beat) You know kind of sweet. In a dentist sort of way.

HE

Gee, thanks

SHE

You know what I wish.

HE

What's that?

SHE

I wish my brother would just go away. Just disappear and leave me alone. But you know what else?

HE

What?

SHE

I sort of like you too. Maybe.
